To Whom It May Concern:

This letter is written in support of the application of [redacted] for admission to graduate school to pursue the study of law.

[redacted] was assigned to my command in 1968 and was a member of the commissioning crew of the U.S.S. HORNE (DLG 30). After the ship was commissioned he continued as a member of the crew during a tour of duty in the Vietnam zone of operations.

As a member of the commissioning crew of a newly constructed naval vessel, [redacted] worked many long hours together with his other crew members to complete the myriad of tasks required to make the ship seaworthy. His singleminded attention to duty together with his excellent seamanship during actual operations combined to make him a most valuable member of the ship's complement.

I recommend he receive strong consideration by any graduate school to which he may apply for admission.
